MINING CONGRESS

Colorado Preserves Her Lead in the Drilling Contest.

SENATOR WOLCOTT'S SPEECH.

Loyalty to Silver Is Greater Than to Any Party—Resolutions to be Presented This Morning—Officers Elected.

DENVER, Nov. 19.—The mining congress met for this morning, in the Peoples' Store, with 300 delegates in attendance. Governor Hale, of Georgetown, Colo., made a long speech on the demonetization question. The committee recommended that the congress be made a permanent organization. It also recommended the following officers: President, Jerome B. Grant, of Colorado; vice-presidents, appointees of the governors; secretary, Charles A. Edwards, of Denver; assistant secretaries, Aaron Gove, of Lincoln; Fred Dow, of Maine, and J. C. Mooney, of Custerville, Idaho. After adopting the report of the committee on resolutions, which was amended to give Colorado the first place in the subject set for a speech, a committee consisting of Harry B. Morse of Colorado, Senator Stewart of Nevada and Hon. Martin Maginnis of Montana escorted Judge Niles to the chair. In accepting the position of president Judge Searles said the delegates in attendance showed they had a deep interest and a lively solicitude in everything concerning the mining interest. He had the pleasure of coming to visit Denver five or six years ago and was anxious to see if the full realization of their expectations was realized. He was one of a delegation and returned to tell what words could not express his feelings. His business was that of presiding officer. He came as an humble inquirer after truth, only sought a quiet niche where he could sit and listen to the deliberations. He also mentioned this modest wish to his Colorado representative he was asked "Do you propose to come here and do nothing?" To which he didn't. He represented the golden state of California and was proud of the distinguished honor. He had been called upon to preside over the congress with impartiality. He would try to justify the confidence. The judge referred to his first acquaintance with Senator Tabor, when they tramped over California and Colorado and shared their wealth together, when they had only two bits between them. Colorado had more distinguishing than all the rest of the world. Colorado pioneers were compelled to depend on their own resources and when they did anything no man could gainsay it. The people of Colorado had more faith in their own conclusions than any others in the world. It was likely that a great deal of work had to be done before the congress adjourned. It might not make much practical progress but the people were educated up to their issues and against the opposition which will come before them. A perfect storm of applause emphasized the close of the speech.

Adjournment for lunch was taken, and on reassembling in the afternoon the congress appointed vice presidents as follows: Arkansas, T. B. Gift; Arizona, R. C. Power; California, R. McPherson; Colorado, H. M. Teller; Canada, Donald Mackay; Idaho, J. Hutchinson; Illinois, J. M. Dooley; Kansas, Lyman Plumb; Russian empire, Mr. Rosenbaum; Michigan, S. S. Curtis; Maine, Alexander Lester; Missouri, Col. John Doniphan; Montana, Governor Hauser; Nebraska, Lorenzo S. Chase; Texas, O. W. Crawford; Utah, Senator Wm. M. Stewart; Ohio, Mr. E. Miller; New Mexico, A. Frank Chavez; Pennsylvania, Geo. R. Kaig; North Dakota, Seth Bullock; Vermont, T. Mailey; Wyoming, G. W. Fox; Utah, R. Thomas; Oregon, J. h. Romig.

The committee on resolutions the chairman appointed as members at large: Col. Irwin, Utah; ex-Senator H. W. Tabor, Colorado; Governor Hauser, Montana; Robert M. Clay, Canada, and J. J. Mullally, Colorado.

E. J. Wolcott, director of the mining department of the World's Fair, was given the floor to act forth the advantages of the Columbian Exposition and the necessity of the mining States making an exhibit that would show the world ideas of the importance of the industry.

Senator E. O. Wolcott was called upon. He referred to the demonetization of silver in 1873 as a dire story. You have heard it a hundred times in your education; yet as long as currency is a medium of exchange in this generation and those who come to follow that act of demonetization will be pointed at with scorn as the perpetration of political, dishonest, treacherous. Congress saw fit to strike from the face of the earth this metal which had been consecrated by centuries as a standard of value. For the last eighteen years the representatives of the different states of the west have been struggling to place silver on the pedestal where it belonged for years. It is no longer a party question. We want honest money and need money, and we say to the people that the action of this government is more honest, solvent and better if it is silver and gold than if backed by gold alone. Free coinage will come not because any political party supports it but because it is demanded by any political party. It will come by means of the beneficial work of such a law the hands of labor will be employed and man's work will command its pay. It will come because it will benefit the better classes to meet in fair discussions which they have incurred. The masses of people throughout the world join in a demand which no power can resist.

He did not expect to have the pleasure of listening in the deliberations, as he was on the eve of departing for Washington. He expected to have left before this time in this congress there were those whose industry and capital made the silver question to the front. He was not able to discuss it and answer every argument that might be leveled to degrade universal money. He promised to do some legislation and try to interpret the sentiments of the congress.

He then concluded with the hope that it will set all doubts as to the silver question: "The congress, will be most beneficial. The fund of information will show the fact it brings closer together all of the Union engaged in the work. I trust that you will discuss such matters as relate to all these matters I believe your judgment will be, not probable, except what the result of your deliberations as a loyal son of Colorado what may be the wishes of the party to which I belong in the executive, and no matter of course may remove me from the office of official patronage, under no circumstances vision, that is shall so long as I remain for the free and unlimited coinage of silver."

He was called for and given by the audience rising and three cheers. A scene of confusion followed. The delegates repeated the demonstration and passed resolutions for silver, and upholding the dignity of the [illegible] was called to the platform as the leader of the faction that calls itself the coinage of the American people [illegible]. He predicted disaster and ruin to the business and general commercial system of the country if foreign nations were allowed to unload their silver upon the United States and to receive gold in return. He asserted that Mexico in another year would produce more silver than this country, and that one small district in Australia was preparing to produce more silver than Colorado. All that was wanted was the encouragement of free coinage.

Charles S. Thomas of Colorado replied to these arguments in a sincere, earnest, and boldly advocated free and unlimited coinage as the only remedy for the abuses of the money.

Congress then adjourned to the morning when the committee on resolutions will be ready to report.

RESOLUTIONS PREPARED.

DENVER, Nov. 19.—The committee on resolutions beg leave to report the following resolutions:

Whereas, The demonetization of silver worked a practical violation of every contract then existing in the United States, entailed uncounted losses, reduced prices more than thirty per cent., and its effect is presently to make debts perpetual as it takes from the debtor ability to pay, and causes contraction in the currency which reduces values until there is no profit left to the farmer, planter or man of small capital who depend upon the sale of their products for returns for their labor;

And whereas, we believe that a [illegible] the government backed dollar for dollar by gold and silver coin on deposit in the treasury of United States is a safe and sound currency and has been approved by the people; and whereas, the gold and silver of the west, pouring in a steady stream upon the east for forty years vitalized every form of business there, steadied and upheld the credit of the nation through the great war and made resumption possible; and whereas, what we demand is as much now to the interest of the East as of the West, as the products of the east exceed in value the products of the west.

Resolved, That the First National Mining congress is unalterably in favor of the principle of bi-metalism as approved by Jefferson and Hamilton, enacted into law by congress in 1792 and accepted by the country for all public and private business for the first eighty years of our country's history; that we believe gold and silver, not one to the exclusion of the other, are the money metals of the constitution; that we are opposed to any law which treats silver as a commodity; that we believe gold and silver should have by law equal rights, uses and monetary powers and to that end we demand of the congress of the United States the enactment of a law by which silver shall be coined free in all the mints equally with gold, and to have with it full and unrestricted money power, and that the coinage be in the ratio of 16 to 1 and when the coinage is represented by treasury notes each dollar shall represent 412½ grains of standard silver or 25.8 grains of gold.

And whereas, by section 3691 it is provided that the coin paid for duties on imported goods shall be set apart as a special fund and shall be applied first to the payment in coin of the interest on the bonds and notes of the United States, second to the purchase or payment of the 1 per centum of the entire debt of the United States to be made within each fiscal year, which is to be set apart as a sinking fund and the interest of which shall in like manner be applied to the purchase or payment of the public debt as the secretary of the treasury shall from time to time direct, third the residue to be paid into the treasury; and, whereas, millions of dollars of duties on imported goods have been paid into the national treasury since the year A. D. 1878 in silver coin and silver certificates, not one cent of which has been by any secretary of the treasury at any time devoted to the first and second objects hereinbefore specified, and, whereas, every secretary of the treasury since the passage of the Bland bill has violated and disregarded said provision,

Resolved, That our senators and representatives in congress assembled be requested to take without delay such steps as shall be necessary to ascertain why the treasury department refuses to obey the statutory requirements and to insure their vigorous enforcement in the future.

Whereas, The supreme court of the United States, at the October term, 1890, thereof, while conceding that no direct adjudication thereof has been made, declared the legitimate inferences of several of its decisions to be made: "That the exception of mineral lands from grants in the acts of congress should be considered to apply only to such lands as were at the time of the grant known to be so valuable for their minerals as to justify the expenditure of their extraction." And whereas this dictum of the supreme court, if it should become law, would invest the Pacific Railway companies holding grants of land from the government with a vast number of the best mines discovered within the limits of said grants by prospectors and miners, who have located thereon in good faith and developed and sold therein in the honest belief that said grants were limited to agricultural lands only as declared in the acts of congress making them; and whereas, if said construction of it becomes the law of the land, it will take vast regions of mineral land out of the market, either for future explorations or purchase to the manifest injury of the people; wherefore, be it

Resolved, That this congress protests against any construction of the statutes of the United States which will result in such a system of wholesale confiscation, and the consequent enrichment of great combinations already enjoying the bounty of the government, and calls upon the representatives of the people in congress assembled to take such prompt and immediate action as may be within the constitutional prerogative to destroy this threatened danger.

Resolved, That the alien act, at least so far as it operates to exclude foreign capital from investment in mining lands in the territories, is false in principle and pernicious in effect, and that therefore the interests of the mining territories demand at the hands of congress an immediate repeal.

Signed by the members of the committee,
H. A. W. TABOR, Chairman.

C. M. DONAHUE, Secretary.

I cheerfully subscribe to all the above report except that I prefer the coining of silver limited to the product of the mines of the United States.

THE DRILLING CONTEST.

DENVER, Nov. 19.—The second day of the drilling contest disappointed Colorado people in general and the men from Leadville in particular. The result of the Butte team remains at the head of the list and it is a foregone conclusion that they take first money. They had no rivals in the contest except Sheriff Kennedy, of Lake county, and his partner, who have made the best record in the western country. Everyone waited for the result this evening and Leadville men put their last dollar on the home team, which was considered invincible. The result, however, took thousands of dollars out of the pockets of the carbonate campers and although the finish was close there was no room left for a dispute, with the solitary exception of a complaint that the rock used by Leadville was much harder than the stone on which the Butte team made their famous record.

Kennedy and Kinker at the end of their allotted time had drilled 29 12-16 inches or 3-16 of an inch less than the Montana score. Betting was six to one in favor of the Colorado men and thousands of dollars changed hands on the result. The decision is not universally satisfactory, and is probable that

The Alliance is discussing the question of whether if shall or shall not discard the sub-treasury plan. A year ago the discussion would have been interesting.

The eclipse of the moon was not visible in New York, and the Democrats of that state are no longer under the necessity of using the World's Fair issue for another campaign.

Denver is thoroughly taken up with the Mining Congress and is giving the delegates a royal reception. After what the mining men have done for Denver too much cannot be given in return.

The popularity of reciprocity is shown by the number of people who claim to be its author. Whoever may have been, Blaine was the one who brought it into prominence, and gave it a practical trial.

The benefit of the postal subsidy law is apparent in the establishment of regular lines of steamers from southern ports to Europe. It is a pity that Democratic stalwarts will control the next congress under the mask of economy.

Senator Vest is cited as the author of the statement that the Democratic party is willing to postpone the silver question if it be necessary to prevent Republican success. The statement is quite unnecessary. The Democratic party will do anything or promise anything that is apparently to its advantage.

The definite agreement between the city and the Denver and Rio Grande railroad in regard to the Huerfano viaduct puts that much needed project on a much more solid foundation than ever before. There is to be some delay which is necessary under the circumstances, but there is every reason to believe that the viaduct will be completed according to the plans and the time of the agreement. In this connection we feel that we ought not to let this occasion pass without congratulating our evening contemporary. No one can ever know how much its frantic efforts, its arguments—and especially its abuse of the railroad—have contributed to hasten this improvement.

It is stated that the recent incident in Chicago of the Anarchists has made some of the foreigners who had proposed to send exhibits to the World's Fair anxious to know whether their lives and property would be safe in that city. It is a hard matter to make the Europeans understand how harmless and absurd a creature the Anarchist is when he stands up in the daylight where everybody can see him. He is chiefly dangerous when left to plot and mutter in secrecy and darkness, and the worst thing in the world that can be done with him is to drive him by oppression into the sympathy of the community. There are no men with an average amount of intelligence and education who put any confidence in the plans of Anarchists, and it is only from victims of oppression who fly to their company for redress or revenge that danger is to be feared. It is not necessary that Chicago should follow the example of European cities and stamp out Anarchism as though it was the plague, but the police of that city certainly have the knowledge and the power to suppress disorders which are dangerous to life and property.

A Climatic Investigation.

Cor. N. Y. Sun.

Dr. Edmund Charles Wendt is in London, en route to the Riviera on a mission that may prove to be of great importance to the civilized world. Dr. Wendt is commissioned by the New York Medical Record to investigate the sanitary and climatic conditions of all the principal cities of southern France and Italian Riviera, as well as of Florence, Naples and Rome, to ascertain whether the conditions are as beneficial to patients, whom physicians from all parts of the world send thither, as has always been imagined. Dr. Wendt says that many patients feel, upon returning from wintering in these sunny southern cities, that they have not been benefitted, and it is with a view to settle this question for all medical humanity that The Record sends him over here. His investigations will occupy the entire winter.

The Colorado Midland is showing off the lethargy it has shown for some time and is preparing to sell out to the Santa Fe syndicate with its orders flying. In other words, it is preparing to assert itself as a sort of connecting link between Denver and Pacific slope points. All the circumstances are in its favor and will combine to make the line superior to the much vaunted Union Pacific.

The first step has been taken in the campaign by an order for the restoration of the double daily passenger service on Sunday, November 29. The meeting of the stockholders will be an unequalled opportunity for through travel. General manager Cornell, when asked in regard to the significance of his order, replied in harmony with the above view. "Yes," said he, "our company is about to take advantage of the Colorado Midland's being the shortest line by seventy-five miles from Denver, via Colorado Springs, to Buena Vista, Leadville, Aspen, Glenwood Springs, Grand Junction, Salt Lake, Ogden and San Francisco, thus enabling our trains to leave Denver in advance of competing lines and make the connections. We have received many complimentary notes from the traveling public, who have taken the Colorado Midland railway, and who seem to be fully of the opinion that the road is unequaled throughout the world, and the demand for additional train service having become so great, we have now decided to inaugurate a permanent double daily through passenger service. Through sleeping car lines will be established, and as the train will be scheduled upon fast time, it will bring the cities and towns located upon our line into still closer business relations with Denver."

Changing Fashions and Workmen

When Mrs. Langtry took a notion to wear dresses without buttons the result was the throwing out of employment of many button makers, but when the fashion of locks and ornamental hairpins and hairpins came in there was a new demand for workmen. The rapid introduction of electric lighting has made a lot of gas fixtures obsolete and created a demand for a new set of mechanics to make electrical apparatus. For many years gutta-percha and india rubber held the market for a thousand toys and fancy goods, but celluloid came in for a share of the profits and soon afforded employment to thousands of workmen in great factories. Gutta percha has almost gone out of the market and india rubber has become so valuable that nobody ever sees the old india rubber shoes that used to keep the feet of our grandfathers dry.—New York Sun.

The ordinary white glass is made of a pretty and free from color which leaves little to be desired. But a greater degree of hardness might be imparted to it, especially if it is intended for eyeglasses without a frame. Bubble colorless glass, however, a colored raw material is in demand, chiefly intended for the protection of weak eyes. Formerly green glass was much used for protective spectacles, and arctic travelers have long worn great of them. Here green glass extinguishes violet, red and even some rays and causes objects to appear of a green color. The glass, colored with [illegible] is said to be preferred.—Cincinnati Times.

HADES AT LAST LOCATED.

Claims of a Parson That It Is Fifty-two Miles Beneath the Earth's Surface.

"Hell is just fifty two miles straight down from Chicago or any other place on the earth's surface."

Such is the startling theory of the Rev. C. A. A. Taylor, the traveling agent for the Florida African Methodist Episcopal conference. De Talver has become well known as a firm believer in a literal hades and the theory that the "sun do move." The preacher is a full blooded negro, with a massive forehead and an intellectual cast of features. He has traveled extensively in America and Europe, and he has taken several degrees in this country as well as abroad. He is a spirited talker and possesses much of the eloquence for which orators of his race are noted.

"Yes, sir," he said to a reporter, "I have measured the distance to hell seven times and find that it is just fifty two miles straight down. I can bottom hell with the Bible and sustain it with science. The Bible tells time and again that hell is down. I could quote text after text to prove that. Now, we finite mortals by excavations find that the nearer the center of the earth we go the higher is the temperature. I have figured it out carefully and find it is just fifty-two miles to where the molten sea begins. That is hell. Volcanoes prove the Bible to be correct in this regard."

"What is in this lake of fire?"

"The devil and his angels. There are many earthquakes and upheavals of the earth which prove that the old dragon is foaming with rage and clanking his chains beneath us. I do not think that the wicked are yet there. They probably won't go until the judgment day."

"You are also a believer in the Jasper theory that the 'sun do move,' are you not?"

"Most emphatically I am. I can prove it by the Bible and science. There are almost innumerable texts which prove that the sun moves. When the sun was commanded to stand still, it must have been moving. When it was ordered to go back 10 degs. it must have moved. If heavenly authority is to be discredited, then the Bible is not and should not be an acceptable book. Job speaks of the lengths of the earth, and in another place the Bible speaks of the four corners of the earth. The earth is a great plain and the sun comes up and goes down."

"Where does the sun stay at night?"

"I do not know, but I will find out before I am through."

"How do you explain the circumnavigation of the globe?"

"I don't believe there is any such thing. The ships simply sail around the horizon. There is no such thing as sailing up a globe and down a globe. The mariner's compass is tampered with on a voyage. Its so called variations are regulated by man to meet his own ideas. In this way the ships sail around the horizon when it is thought they go east or west. If mariners would let the compass alone and follow its needle without meddling they would come to the edge of the earth."

"What sort of a place is the edge?"

"I don't know, but I do know that the earth is flat, else the waters would all run out of the ponds, rivers and seas. The River Nile does not fall a foot in 150 miles of its flow."

"If the earth is flat, how do you account for the tides?"

"Very easily. They are caused by the evaporation of the water. Rising and falling the shifting water causes the tides. There are many things which I do not yet understand, but which I shall know some time. I believe I am divinely commissioned to revolutionize science and bring it into harmony with the Bible. The north pole has never been discovered. I believe that when it is, a great deal of mystery which now curtails my researches will be cleared up. I think the key to many of the most difficult physical problems lies at the north pole, and when that is found I do not think I shall be longer at a loss to understand where the sun goes nights."—Chicago News.

Mr. Youngchappe. I don't need sympathy.

"Tell that to the bachelors. I'm a married man. Your dear little wifey is just out of boarding school, isn't she?"

"Yes."

"Ha, ha! I thought so. And you are already suffering the agonies of dyspepsia, aren't you?"

"Never was better in my life."

"Eh? What's that? And with a young wife doing the cooking?"

"She doesn't. She makes me do it."—New York Weekly.

Increase of Specialists.

For several years past specialism has taken such hold on the public mind that, perforce, the universalists have been almost driven to haul down their colors. Some particular persons seem to have as many specialists as they have organs. I know a lady who boasts of her eye doctor, ear doctor, nose doctor, heart doctor, brain doctor, and nose doctor, as well as what she calls her "general practitioner" and of all of them she speaks as if they were men of different profession, just as she might speak of her watchmaker, her bellows maker or her undertaker. The Sense of Smell.

Experts in the manufacture of perfumery say that the sense of smell can be developed just as acutely as the senses of sight, hearing, taste and touch. This would seem paradoxical, for it is a well known fact that after smelling five or six different perfumes the uneducated nose loses its power that ability to distinguish, and is entirely lost. ANECDOTES RELATED BY DR. LORETTUS S. METCALF.

As Managing Editor of the North American Review He Met Many Famous People—Wendell Phillips, Henry Ward Beecher, Yoemans, "Nasby" and Others.

[Special Correspondence.]

New York, Nov. 16.—Dr. Loretus S. Metcalf, who for [illegible] years was managing editor of The North American Review and for the past [illegible] of The Forum, has been most of the time since have been prominent during the last quarter of a century and had an intimate acquaintance with many of them. In a recent conversation he said:

"I knew Wendell Phillips well and saw him [illegible] in Boston. In talking with him I always had to get a position where I could see him and the light, in order that I might watch the play of his features. No man face that I ever saw [illegible] well possessed, in my mind, [illegible] was disturbed by manner, but kind and sympathetic. In my conversation he spoke in a low tone and without emotion, and but for the occasional flashes in his eye one would not suspect the fire that burned within him. When on the public platform or in the pulpit he was [illegible] for the man who [illegible] the privacy of his own [illegible] could be more gentle in speaking of an opponent. He was perfectly aware of the pleasing qualities of his figure and voice, and was almost jealous of them, that is, he was annoyed because his audiences were conscious of them. He wished his hearers to be entirely occupied with the thought that he had to express.

"Oratory to his mind was a means, not an end, and when it made itself apparent to the eye and the ear it was in his judgment [illegible] gone before the purpose he still I have become so full of a subject that I could contain my feelings no longer. Time I have tried to speak very directly and simply, as though I were talking to a small company of friends, but always the newspapers the next day have said that I have made another great oratorical effort.'

"Henry Ward Beecher was certainly the most interesting man that I have ever met. While in the cases of most persons of reputation the greatness that commands admiration at first loses something of its charm upon acquaintance, Mr. Beecher's strength constantly grew upon one as time gave the opportunity to see the many sides of his wonderfully original mind. At his Brooklyn house he always received his more intimate friends in the family sitting room, declaring that he never felt quite at home in the drawing room. There, curled up at one end of a sofa, with his visitor before him at the other, he would give full vent to his brilliant conversational powers, playing all over and about a subject, as though he thoroughly enjoyed to make use of his ready command of language.

"Once I said to him, perhaps a little flippantly, that certain theological positions that he had been stating were not very well established, when he retorted instantly, 'Well, what is well established?' and he took up all the popular scientific and philosophical theories in turn, and poured upon them such a flood of witty criticism that at the time I felt that I could never afterward quite safely put trust in any teaching. He always intended to fix upon the subject of his Sunday morning's discourse early in the week previous, in order that he might have several days in which to turn it over in his mind, but on one Saturday morning he told me that he had not the smallest idea as to what he should speak upon on the next day. I asked him how he succeeded in such cases, and he answered, 'Oh I come out all right. When I hear that great organ behind me, and see before me all those expectant eyes, I always find something to say.'

"He could, he said, speak safely without preparation on any ordinary occasion, provided that the beginning he had clearly in mind the conclusion to which he wished to arrive. He declared, however, that he was never altogether free from stage fright; that his knees always shook a little when he went upon a platform. In a few instances he had become completely entranced while speaking, losing not only consciousness of all surrounding objects, but the power to remember afterward what he had said. He told me that his sensations on those occasions were of a rush of blood upward as new ideas came to him, and then a feeling that he had lost his body and had only a head. Afterward he would find himself seated, covered with cold perspiration, and see his hearers leaning forward in their seats and looking at him with close attention.

"He was known to disbelieve the doctrine of everlasting future punishment, and I urged him to state his views at length in the periodical that I was then conducting. He consented on condition that a paper defending the dogma should be obtained from Dr. Shedd and published in advance of his own. Dr. Shedd prepared his argument at once, but Mr. Beecher delayed, and finally I adopted the plan of dunning him regularly, wherever he might be for the promised article. He made a tour through the west at that time, and when he reached Leadville, Colo., he found one of my reminders of his delinquency awaiting him. He answered: 'I have received your telegram, again beseeching me to explode hell. But I have been to Salt Lake City, and I am now at Leadville, and am not half so sure of my ground as I was. After all, Shedd may be right.'

"Professor E. L. Youmans, the founder and for many years the editor of The Popular Science Monthly, a short time before his death told me an interesting mental experience that he had had. Before Richard A. Proctor's popular scientific books had appeared or any other important effort had been made to treat astronomical facts in a way to interest the general public, the professor delivered, for the benefit of some worthy cause, in a little chapel in Brooklyn, a lecture on the sun. He descoursed with a great deal of enthusiasm some striking discoveries that had then just been made, and produced a great impression upon his hearers. Soon afterward he appeared in New York as a man from one of the large towns in the western part of the state, representing a well known but lost its feed in spectacles in distress just on the eve of the beginning of its yearly course.

"This man applied to Gough, Beecher, Phillips and the other premier stars of the time, and found them all engaged, then heard of the Brooklyn lecture on the sun and called upon Professor Youmans. The professor was reluctant to spare a moment from his engagements. He declared that he was [illegible] and that he should be sure to disappoint an audience that was so well pleased to hear another on the same subject.

"[illegible] however, he consented. Being [illegible] at the time [illegible] not use notes. [illegible] he dashed off a lecture on astronomy, [illegible] making [illegible] he realized that he was [illegible] facts that were being [illegible] not be expected that he [illegible] in the transports of [illegible] he [illegible] have heard [illegible] the proprietors of [illegible] throughout the [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible]

THE BICYCLE IN BATTLE.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT USE FOUND FOR THE WHEEL.

The Valuable Experiments Recently Made by American Militiamen—How European Soldiers Utilize the Bicycle in Their Maneuvers.

(Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.)

MILITARY bicycling is only in its infancy as yet. Step by step, however, it is gaining in favor both with army officers and with national guardsmen. The very prospect of making a cyclomen as frail and as liable to get out of gear as the cycle an adjunct in the art of war for long excited the risibilities of men who had fought with Grant and "Little Phil." At first they called it "fancy business," and looked on with amusement at the younger set of soldiers and their theories.

But reports and records are now coming in, showing what has been accomplished, reports full of statistics and facts that make the veterans pull their whiskers and think. These reports show that the bicycle is not only a necessary but an almost invaluable aid to warfare as it is now practiced. Even its most enthusiastic devotees do not claim that the wheel is of any earthly use in the field. They emphatically say that for charges and countercharges and advances along the line the bicycle would only be a hindrance and a failure. They claim instead that the military wheel's province is reconnoitering and scouting, the taking of advanced posts, and the mounting of topographical engineers and signalmen. The reports of experiments already made show that army cycling has advanced from a stage of theory to one of practice.

While the American experiments have proved the success of the "wheelers" beyond a doubt, Europe has gone still further in the science. Bicycles are in actual use in nearly every army of the Continent and England. It was during the Italian field maneuvers of 1875 that the first trial was made. The bicyclists of Somma were called upon to carry dispatches, and though the machines of that day were heavy, clumsy and badly geared compared with those of now, their value was at once recognized.

Germany and Belgium have well drilled and effective corps, mountainous and ballooned Switzerland is establishing one, and England, according to a recently published report, has a cyclist section of over 5000 men. The most famous of them all is the Twenty-sixth Middlesex Cyclist corps of London, numbering 120 officers and privates, and having a house of its own opposite Chelsea hospital. Even Russia, popularly supposed to be barbaric and behind the times, has added bicycles to her regular service under the newly coined name of samoskaty, "self roller."

THE ARMY BICYCLE.

Though the experiments in the United States date back to the spring of 1889, it is only within the past three months that the seal of official army approval has been set upon them. Lieutenant William H. C. Bowen, of the Fifth United States infantry, visited Camp Watson at Niantic, Conn., on a tour of inspection of the Connecticut National Guard, lasting from Aug. 15 to 21. Major Charles L. Burdette, engineer and signal officer of the First brigade, had placed the signal corps of the First regiment (one officer and nine men) on wheels. Lieutenant Bowen said in his report:

"Under its commanding officer, First Lieutenant Howard A. Giddings, this corps of wheelmen have reached a high degree of proficiency. Major Burdette was the originator of this plan. The men were armed with the Colt's repeating carbine and with the revolver. A man mounted on a bicycle can go many places where it would be impossible to take a horse, and it is just the thing in sending messages in nearly every case. As a fighting force it may not be favored, but as messengers, patrols and advance guards, in my opinion, it would be invaluable. I would recommend to the serious consideration of the war department the advisability of experimenting with the bicycle.

"Speaking of the utility of the wheel in actual warfare, General Wolseley is reported to have said: 'There are few countries in the world where you cannot use a bicycle. . . . I do not remember one campaign's march or any one fight in which there was a part where cyclists could not have been used with the greatest possible advantage.'

"The principal duties of the military cyclist are those of carrying dispatches, furnishing and reconnoitering. As applied to the signal service, the wheels, in my opinion, would almost double its usefulness."

At the camp at Niantic the several regiments each performed a tour of outpost duty. A line of front a mile in length was thrown out two miles away and then attacked. The wheelmen were detailed as couriers to carry messages back to camp. Signal stations were also established, and exact time comparisons made.

The two cyclists covered the two miles of sandy road from front to camp in seven minutes. The messages flagged required fifteen minutes for transmission. It was also found that the wheels stood every strain of the week's hard service "up hill and down dale" without once needing repair.

Another interesting exploition was the drilling of the cyclists as mounted infantry. They were sent across open and broken country without inconvenience, and made to rally behind the inverted wheels for defense, and fire from this position. This movement is known as a "charge." It was also discovered that the wheel could make a shorter turn than the horse, and dodge many a saber cut.

It may be safely said that Connecticut was the first state to actually test the military bicycle question by mounting a corps of its militiamen on wheels for a tour of duty in camp. But Connecticut was the first in the field in cycling exploits. That honor goes to New York, and experiments there have been confined to the Thirteenth regiment.

It has said to have originated during the Thirteenth's trip to Canada last fall. For years the project was talked of, but nothing definite was done. Colonel Charles H. Lawrence, himself a wheelman, and Captain George C. Cochran voiced the sentiments of the entire corps. On May 26, 1889, companies A and F of the Thirteenth, under the command of Captain Cochran, bicycled at Camp Hill, L. I. Seven or eight miles headed the line of march. The army orders, dated May 15, contained a paragraph as follows: "Outpost duty will be performed by a corps of twenty bicycle men (acting as cavalry)." But the bicycle could be used.

The cold expedition marked the first use of the army wheel in America. Early in the morning orders went forth from the Thirteenth headquarters for each company to make a reconnoissance preliminary to the adoption of a "line of occupation," that was the original guard maneuver that was ordered June 13 of that year. Captain Cochran and Sergeant Pratt, of Company F, made their tour on safety machines, covering a distance of twenty-five miles in four and a half, measuring all distances along the line of retreat and the line of defense, and drawing topographical sketches meanwhile. Much better time would have been made had it not been that the roads were covered with a sticky mud. The experiments were made until the spring, when Captain Cochran and his company signal corps went to camp and drilled them on the armory floor. That they might become expert riders, he put them night after night through the English evolutions of tilting at the ring, tent pegging and sharp turns. This little corps numbers about a dozen, and though state headquarters does not recognize it, the regiment does. It will form a great nucleus for the cycle battalion that Captain Luscomb and General Porter are advocating, and a bill will probably be introduced in the Albany legislature this winter to establish it. But in the meantime Company F's corps stands unique and alone.

It first manifested out officially on the regiment's Decoration Day, last spring, as an advanced guard. On July 4 and 5 it made a twenty-mile tour to Hunt's Point, N. Y., having scouted, signalled and repulsed the enemy by day and night.

In no other state except Massachusetts have cycling experiments been made. Massachusetts herself has done very little as yet, but her First signal corps has the matter in hand and is preparing tests.

In all the experiments made in this country ordinary wheels have been used. A distinctively military machine, however, has been devised by Captain Luscomb. While not yet tried, it seems perfect in theory. It is of safety build, weighs about 45 pounds by the scale, and has the security of gearing and the use of a rather pneumatic tire. This tire, inflating to nearly three inches, takes the sting out of jolting when on rough ground. There is also a scabbard for the rifle and signal flag at either side. The brake is applied to the front wheel to economize space. At the front of the handle bar hold is an arm between the wheels, a strong clip for a long lance for instruments, maps and cartridges.

Captain Luscomb does not approve of the cyclist carrying a rifle though. "He is a scout and a scorer of advance posts," he says, "an engineer and a signalman, and if he is connected he must run as fast as he can. Pistols will defeat him amply. He can travel 100 miles a day easily, and even 200 in a single twenty-four hours if he must. That would be impossible with a horse. As a means of communication between posts where signaling would betray, the cyclist is most admirable."

CAPTAIN COCHRAN AND HIS MEN.

Captain Cochran wants his cyclists armed with a long range repeating rifle. "As mounted infantry he seizes a strategical position, and then, the cycle being left, he resumes his former function of an infantryman."

It has been estimated that the expense of mounting a cavalryman is $225 a year, while it is only $15 for the cyclist.

CROMWELL CHILDE.

Wants Them to Be Farmers.

By his purchase of 7,000,000 acres of land in the Argentine Republic, and by the conditions under which homes on this vast tract are allotted to refugees from Russia, Baron Hirsch hopes to revive a taste for agriculture among the Hebrews he is trying to benefit. He remarked recently: "In twenty or thirty years let those of our colonists who have prospered make trades men, mechanics, lawyers or doctors of their children, if so pleases them; but the present generation of emigrants must be taught to learn and to like agriculture, so that they may stand on a level with all races of men."

A Land of Giant Flowers.

Despite Pugilist John L. Sullivan's sweeping denunciation of the antipodes and the people who live there, it seems that they excel in floral displays if not in enthusiasm for prize fighters. Chrysanthemums eighteen inches in circumference are not uncommon in Australia, and many varieties grown there surpass in size and equal in color the finest known in America. All this is not remarkable, however, in a land where the heliotrope grows to be a good sized tree and the fuchsia clambers to the second story windows.

SOUTH DAKOTA'S NEW MEMBER.

Congressman Elect Jolley's Varied and Interesting Career.

There is not a man in the town where Lawyer John L. Jolley, South Dakota's new congressman, makes his home more respected than he. His neighbors have known him for "nigh onto thirty year." In build he is rather small, quite slender and decidedly wiry. He was born at Montreal July 14, 1840, chose the law as his profession, and at the age of twelve was apprenticed to a printer and worked at it four years. At seventeen he removed to Wisconsin, and from there went to Vermillion, Dak., where he has lived ever since. The winter of 1866-7 he taught in the historic "old log school house," the first public school building in the Dakotas. On the rude benches within the rough hewn walls and under a sod roof sat some of the present great men of the state, but little did Mr. Jolley dream that either he or his flock would gain distinction.

JOHN L. JOLLEY.

In 1867 and in 1868 he was elected to the territorial house of representatives. In 1875 and again in 1881 he was made a member of the territorial council. The Republican nominating convention of 1884 recognized him as the representative of Dakota territory. He worked as a delegate in the conventions which framed the famous Sioux Falls constitution, and in both terms of the legislature since admission he has been in the state senate.

In the war for the Union he fought three years, beginning as a private and working his way as far as a lieutenancy. He is called "Colonel" Jolley, but it is a westernism.

In 1874 he married a Miss Grange. The occasion was to be private, but in some way his friends heard of it. The Granger movement was then at its height, and advantage was taken of the situation. A procession was formed, with every kind of vehicle or moving machine used in farming, and the wedding was not at all a quiet one. Mr. Jolley was captured boldly, placed upon a mower and made the central figure of the parade. A devoted wife and three children gladden the home, which is always as sunny as the name is is cheerful.

Forced from Home by Taxation.

Heavy taxation is cutting down the population of Afghanistan like a pestilence, the only difference being that the people instead of dying have fled to other countries. The decrease since the last census in the district of Candahar alone is 10,000 souls. Many of the fugitives have gone to British India and Beloochistan. In the northern part of the country the exodus has been still greater, the people emigrating to the Russian possessions in Turkestan, for instance, where, when the present census was taken, the Russians were 16,000 occupied houses, there are now only 6,000 houses with tenants. The ameer's country used to be called the land of men and stones, but an Indian journal suggests that if the present flight continues it will become a land of stones alone.

Rather Tedious for Acquaintances.

A lady insisted upon some one always sitting so closely beside her as to be able to hold her hand in theirs. Unless her hand was so imprisoned she fancied some evil would assail her—of what nature she did not know, but in her apprehensions took a definite form even to her own imagination. Two persons were compelled to relieve each other in constant attendance upon her, and very irksome must they have found their task.—London Tit-Bits.

Nearly a dozen representatives of the college Y. M. C. A. are in attendance at the Y. M. C. A. convention which is held in Pueblo from the 19th to the 22d of this month. Saturday evening President Slocum will deliver an address before the association.

The literary needs of the college are well supplied this year. With three rival societies—the Minerva, exclusively for ladies, the Apollonian, the young men's debating club, and the Phoenix, the old society of the students—all in full blast, no fault can be found on account of lack of opportunity to display literary talent.

A party of college boys, with a ball of cord to find their way out, and candles to find their way in, explored the old Mammoth cave in Williams' canon, near Manitou, one day last week. They report it extensive and beautiful, but rough and difficult to traverse.

There is an unpleasant epidemic in the way of a catarrhal cold going its rounds through the college, as well as throughout the city. While in most cases it is not sufficiently severe to cause absence from recitations, it is a very disagreeable and unwelcome visitor.

The game of foot ball which was to have been played at Boulder last Saturday, between the Boulder and college eleven, but which it was found necessary to postpone on account of snow, will be played to-morrow afternoon. The team leaves early to-morrow morning.

The freshman English class will have its first debate next Wednesday morning, and will discuss the relative merits of Carlisle and Macaulay.

President Slocum's ethical talk last week was on the subject, perhaps not often spoken on, of "Courtesy." It proved one of the most practical, pleasant and idea-giving of the series.

The Phoenix Literary society meets as usual in the chapel this evening, and will present an interesting programme. The hour is 7:45, and the meeting open to all.

The cadet caps, which have been a long time on the way, arrived on Monday, and the boys are now completely uniformed.

The usual Thanksgiving recess will be observed on Thursday and Friday of next week.

Below is given the programme of the oratorical exercises which occur in the chapel this morning at 11:30 sharp, and to which the public is invited:

PERSONAL.

Mr. Roy Goodale, a former student, was in the city for a few days this week, visiting his brother, Captain Goodale of the cadets.

Rev. Mr. Upton, who was compelled to give up his duties as librarian last year on account of illness, has returned, and is welcomed back to his old post.

Mrs. John Campbell has been secured to take charge of the department of Greek until Professor Murray's recovery.

Mr. Miles R. Bracewell has been quite ill for the last few days, and narrowly escaped an attack of pneumonia. He is now reported as on the road to recovery.

Roasting Grasshoppers.

Indians are fond of the larvæ of many insects, and they do not despise slugs as an article of food. Roasted crickets are a favorite diet with them, particularly in California and Utah. Grasshoppers furnish many tribes with a large part of their subsistence. The usual method of preparing them is to dig a pit smaller at the top than below. Some heated stones are put into the pit and a quantity of grasshoppers thrown upon them. Then some more hot stones are put in, another layer of grasshoppers, and so on until several bushels have thus been roasted. When cool, the grasshoppers are taken out, dried and ground. They are eaten alone or mixed with pounded acorns or berries, the mixture being made into cakes and dried in the sun.—Washington Star.

Seeking Wealth Away from Home.

The natives of Japan are taking advantage of the removal of the restrictions on travel to foreign lands. Since the Mikado permitted his subjects to emigrate, a recent writer says that nearly 100,000 of them have left their native land. There are about 2000 in Hawaii. There is a large number in Australia. They are to be found in many countries of the Asiatic continent, and some are in Europe. There are about 2000 in California, and others are constantly arriving there to work in the vineyards. In the city of New York there may be 200 Japanese, and there are a few in many other American cities. Wherever they go they have the reputation of being industrious and inoffensive. The population of Japan is 40,000,000.

A WINTER IN THE SOUTH.

A winter in the South—the very words conjure up delicious memories for those who have been there. The bright sunny skies, the dry bracing air and the warm sunshine is in decided contrast to the cold bleak North.

The great state of Texas is celebrated as one great broad winter resort in itself, but the following places are, perhaps, particularly popular: Fort Worth, with its mineral baths, healthful climate and good hotels; Austin, the beautiful Capital City; San Antonio, one of the few really historical places in our country; Houston, with its blooming roses, oleanders and groves of oranges and lemons, and Galveston with its delicious sea breezes. These are but a few of the delightful resorts of this highly favored region.

An escape from all the pelting and discomforts of our rigorous weather, transported by magic from the region of snow and ice, to the fragrance of this summer land, is now made possible and easy by the Denver, Texas & Ft. Worth Branch of the Union Pacific System, which runs through Pullman Palace Sleepers between Denver, Ft. Worth, Dallas, Shreveport and New Orleans, and offers exceeding low excursion rates to all Southern cities from Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Trinidad. For a full description of Southern winter resorts, reached over the Union Pacific System, or for excursion rates, apply to W. G. Rice, Union Pacific Ticket agent, office 11 Pike's Peak avenue, for a copy of the Union Pacific Winter Tours Folder.

BEAUTIFUL OKLAHOMA.

The exciting incidents of the two great invasions of Oklahoma territory by home seekers, April 22, 1889 and September 22nd, 1891, have fully established the fact that it is the place in which to cheaply obtain one of Uncle Sam's farms. The lands recently opened are located in the Old Iowa, Sac and Fox and Pottawatomie reservations lying directly east of Guthrie and Oklahoma City, on the A. T. & S. F. R. R. They will constitute counties "A" and "B" with Chandler and Tecumseh as respective county seats both large and rapidly growing towns. Claims can be bought at reasonable figures. For the raising of corn, cotton, wheat and fruit, Oklahoma is unexcelled.

Write to G. T. Nicholson, G. P. & T. A., Topeka, Kan., or J. P. Hall, Colorado Passenger Agent, Denver, Colorado, for a specially prepared folder giving full information relative to "Beautiful Oklahoma."

Leave Colorado Springs, 7:30 p. m., arrive St. Louis second morning, via the Great Rock Island Route. Through Sleeping Car service and all meals in dining cars.

PARLOR CARS.

Our citizens who have not tried those new parlor cars on the afternoon Santa Fe trains should do so. The cars are veritable parlors and the chairs as comfortable as the finest parlor chairs, not to be compared with the ordinary chair cars; something entirely new. Trains carrying these leave for Pueblo at 10.45 a. m. and for Denver at 4.52 p.m.

A NEW REASONS

Why the "WABASH" is the most desirable route for all points East.

First—You can purchase through tickets for all Eastern points at any coupon ticket office in the west over this line taking your choice of routes to the Missouri River.

Second—You can go by the way of Omaha or Kansas City at your pleasure.

Third—From either of those points you can have your choice of "FIVE" distinct routes as follows:

Via the Hannibal Air Line, which is the short line to the East.

Via St. Louis, where close connection is made with all Eastern and Southeastern routes.

Via Chicago, the World's Fair City, sometimes called "the windy city."

Via Toledo, Ohio's busy at island city, connecting at that place with the Lake Shore fast trains to the East.

Via Detroit, Michigan's prettiest and most beautiful city where Eastern lines connect closely.

All of the above named points are reached direct only by the "WABASH" and direct by no other line running from the West.

Ask for your tickets by the way of this line, and accept of them by no other.

We run the finest trains on earth, a bold assertion but a cold fact. Write me for rates, maps, etc.

THE GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1891.

Reed Bros. yesterday sold two lots in Strubel's addition to Mrs. Mary Beckwith and Miss Rose Kiel for $1,120.

Peter Figall and wife, Miss Figall and Master Figall of Montreal, are stopping at the New Alamo, and expect to remain some time.

Bob Ford, the notorious assassin of Jesse James, who is at present dealing faro in Colorado City is under bonds for an assault upon one W. A. Mansfield.

The Union Thanksgiving services this year will be held in the First M. E. church and Rev. H. E. Warren of the same church will preach the sermon.

There are undelivered telegrams at the Western Union telegraph office for Thos. Morgan, "Tyrone," H. A. Williams, Perry La Fountain and Maggie St. Clair.

The trustees of the Glockner house have decided to furnish the third floor of that building and to make other improvements aggregating $8,000 in cost.

Rev. Richard Montague, pastor of the First Baptist church, arrived at home from his trip to Salt Lake the first of the week. He is greatly refreshed after his vacation.

The public is asked to remember the entertainment to be given this evening by Monte Rosa lodge Daughters of Rebekah at Odd Fellows' hall, commencing at 8 o'clock. An oyster supper after the programme. All are invited.

Mr. H. S. Cable, manager of the Manitou and Pike's Peak railway, who has been prostrated by typhoid fever for some months, left yesterday for Chicago, accompanying his father, President R. R. Cable of the Rock Island.

Col. N. Hodgens, grand master of the I. O. O. F. of Colorado; J. M. Norman, grand secretary, and G. Ashley, general baggagemaster of the D. & R. G. R. R., are in the city, visited Pike's Peak lodge last night and are at the New Alamo.

Miss Cora Robinson, daughter of Mr. Charles Robinson, a young lady quite popular among the colored people of the city, left last evening for Carlinville, Ill., where she will attend school. The young lady was born in Colorado and this is her first trip out of the state.

The electric fire alarm system is being rearranged so that there will be two circuits, one south and one north of the City Hall instead of one, as at present. This will aid in locating breaks and will also be useful in that only one half of the system will be disabled by a break in the wire.

The ranchmen in the county of Falcon will have turkey and chicken in abundence Thanksgiving, if they are spry. On Wednesday last a freight train on the Rock Island road met with an accident near Falcon and a number of flat cars containing poultry were overturned. There were about four thousand chickens, ducks and turkeys, and they scattered in every direction over the prairie.

Good apples are for some reason hard to get in Colorado, though this will probably be remedied when the orchards of the state get into bearing. Helm & Kopf have, however, solved the problem for the time being, as will be seen by their advertisement, by the importation of a full carload of Michigan apples of the best quality, embracing all the standard and favorite varieties. The large importation makes the retail price comparatively low.

"Faust in London," with Newton Beers in the stellar role, which comes to the opera house Tuesday night, Nov. 24, has received the unanimous endorsement of press and public. The piece abounds in startling climaxes, ludicrous situations, and has a well defined plot. The principal scenic effects in this masterpiece of melodrama are Heart of Bleaknoor coal mine, London streets at night, and Job's Vision. New songs and bright music are interpolated throughout. Mr. Beers is a comedian of the first order and a good theatrical artist, having won golden opinions from all during his last engagement in this city in the romantic drama "Enoch Arden." Seats are now on sale.

Pres. Manvel in the City.

A distinguished visitor in the city yesterday was President Manvel of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. He came over the Midland in the afternoon from Grand Junction, where he has been concerned in the matter of the arbitration of the Rio Grande Junction railroad difficulties. Mr. Manvel is accompanied by Judge Springer, assistant to the president, and they spent the afternoon in consultation with Mr. J. J. Hagerman, General Manager Collbran of the D. & R. G. and others. They leave for Pueblo today and from there go west.

The Baptist Fair.

The large light lecture room of the First Baptist church, with its numerous alcoves, and the dining room in the basement below, were visited by many people yesterday afternoon, who discussed good warm dinners and suppers, admired the beautiful things on sale, and laid in a supply of Christmas gifts. The lecture room of the church could not have been designed much better for fair purposes, for there are convenient stalls ready for use on either side of the room, and then there is a large open space in the middle for people to meet and talk in out of the way of purchasers.

The reason why some people are called the "fair" sex was shown yesterday when they thronged the rooms admiring and purchasing. In the evening they brought their husbands and brothers and fathers and sons and potential relatives, but still the ladies predominated.

The platform under the big window at the east end was covered with beautiful flowering plants, chiefly chrysanthemums, and the display was of course the first booth on the north side. These floral beauties are all for sale and their display is effected by Mrs. Bonbright and Mr. Dorsey.

The next stand is largely devoted to the sale of articles more useful than ornamental. There are aprons of all kinds, the strong and heavy kitchen protector and the fascinating impracticability which young ladies wear afternoons. These are also warm, and handsome besides." Mrs. White and Mrs. Smith preside here.

In the next stall Mrs. Skinner and Mrs. Colburn sell a variety of articles which are truly styled "fancy work." There are bags of all sorts, for clothespins, shoes, knitting and mending materials, sewing materials, all conveniently and ornamentally fashioned. There are sofa pillows, and many other articles of use and ornament here, too.

Mrs. Trumbull and Mrs. Dudley have a stand by the flower exhibit, where they have all sorts of linen doilies, napkins, splashers, etc., in fine embroidery with wash silk.

The most interesting department of the fair, to all but masculine eyes, is the doll stand in the western stall on the south side of the room. Here ladies as well as children clustered all day long. There are boy dolls dressed as Highlanders and sailors and Fauntleroys, and there are girl dolls of all sorts. One remarkable creation is sort of a Japanese creature, patterned after the Manitou summer girl, perhaps. She has a head that's easily turned and two faces, one of which is always kept concealed in her bonnet. By pulling a string the head rotates half around and so brings either a waking or sleeping countenance into view. All the dolls are "home dressed," like Philadelphia poultry, and there is some beautiful workmanship in their complete wardrobes. Mrs. Fisher is the lady in charge of this department.

At the east end of the room Mrs. Bay sits, surrounded by art and fancy work of the decorative order. She has some fine specimens of decorated china, some beautiful oil paintings and water colors and some silk and satin and embroidered knick-knacks. At her left is a small table on which are displayed some handsome whisk brooms, made by the blind boys at the institute. Mr. Brown who is in charge of the broom shop, has painted a very pretty sign surmounted by a miniature broom, to accompany the whisks and both the advertisement and the advertised attracted much attention.

In the alcove under the ladies' parlor Mrs. Frame and her assistants dispense ice cream and cake for the benefit of those who like light refreshments.

Dinner and supper were served in the basement yesterday and the patronage was so good that nearly everthing was eaten up, and this popular department will not run to-day. The rest of the fair will be continued, opening at 10 o'clock this morning, and ice cream and cake will be served all day.

Rio Grande Earnings.

The Value of Good Clothes.

"I don't know that I ever quite estimated the value of my clothes until one day last week," says a New York woman, the wife of a well known citizen. "We have been moving, and my husband has been taking his meals at a neighboring restaurant—a first class one, by the way. I had not been with him, but on the day of our worst confusion I went there for luncheon. I suppose I am what may be termed an elderly little body, and on this day, with an old long cloak thrown over my 'moving' attire I can fancy I was not impressive. I was, however, civilly received and well served to the very slight lunch I craved, and when I asked to go I left, as is my habit, a coin on the tray of the rather stately waiter who brought me my change. 'Excuse me, mem,' he remarked, returning it; 'we don't take anything from any poor person.' More amused than indignant, I faced him.

"'Why do you think I am too poor to give you some money?' I asked.

"The fellow was nonplused at this directness.

"'Well,' he said, stammering and hesitating, 'I may be mistaken, but, mem, you have that appearance, mem.'

"I said no more, but left the place and did not take up the coin.

"That night I dressed myself with care and went with my husband and a friend who had come up with him to the restaurant for dinner. The same waiter met us, looked at me, then at my husband, whom he knew by sight and name, puckered his lips in a quickly repressed whistle, and—went! Another man to serve us."—New York Times.

The Prospector Disappearing.

The traditional prospector will soon be as extinct as the dodo. He was a picturesque character in fiction and in reality, and he will be missed. His disappearance will not be due to the exhaustion of ground to be prospected, but to the different conditions under which work is now done. In early times the prospectors were literally gold seekers. They were after surface placers. It takes but a little time for enterprising, hardy men to overrun a considerable territory in the search of this class of deposits, easily discoverable by simple planning tests here and there, and only to be looked for in certain topographical situations, and the country has been so thoroughly gone over that the likelihood of finding anything of importance in the way of placers has been steadily lessened.

The prospectors of today give their attention mainly to veins and lodes deposits "in place," which are much more difficult to locate. The pioneers used to cover great distances, undergo almost incredible privations and hardships, and at times face dangers from hostile Indians. Now it is found that the immediate neighborhood of one's own camp is about as likely a place to prospect in as one farther away, and many of the best lode strikes have been made in the heart of districts where mining had been going on for years.—Albert Williams in Engineering.

Value of the Pig's Tail.

The pig's tail has obtained a certain prominence in that it has been made a subject for argument by farmers on the Pacific coast. Some claim that it is useless, while others assert that it indicates the exact physical condition of the animal. If it hangs loose, it indicates that the pig is not in condition and that its feed should be changed. If it be coiled tightly, it indicates contentment and good health.
